

Scene at Hot Springs When Airplanes Landed on Last Friday

AVIATORS ARE TO START HOME ON THEIR LONG FLIGHT AND WILL MAKE ELKO, NEV., TODAY

Before leaving for Elko this afternoon at 4 o'clock, the aviators will fly over Ogden, taking pictures of the city.

The two airplanes which flew from California to Ogden for the Golden Spike celebration are scheduled to start sometime this afternoon on their return journey, flying from Ogden to Elko, Nev., on the first leg of the return flight.

The big de Havilland plane will make the through trip to Elko without landing. But the Curtiss plane, which is much smaller and not so speedy, will probably land at Montello, Nevada, for gasoline. The small plane stopped at Montello for gasoline on the trip coming here.

The small plane also had a rather peculiar experience while crossing the Nevada desert, running out of gasoline and being forced to descend in the desert wilderness. The lieutenant found his gas about exhausted and knew that he must land, although he was over strange country and was guided only by a map which could give very little detail in a 700-mile flight. Volplaning to earth when a level spot was sighted, the officer, who was flying alone, found that he had landed near a branch railroad of some kind. This proved to be the Nevada Central, which runs from Battle Mountain down to Austin, a distance of 91 miles. This railroad is a very small affair, a train running only every other day.

The train which runs over the Nevada Central has some relation to an airplane for it is propelled by a gasoline motor. The aviator who had landed on the line at Dillon about 13 miles from Battle Mountain, soon sighted a gasoline engine coming along the track. He hailed the speeder and prevailed upon the driver to take him to Battle Mountain for gasoline. With the tank filled again, the flight was resumed and the plane landed that night in Elko shortly after dark.

The flight over the Sierra Nevada mountains was not difficult, according to the statements of the aviators, it only being necessary to go to a higher altitude than is usually the case.

Lieutenant William Beck, who will take the big 450-horsepower de Havilland back to Mather field, said this morning that he will feel relieved when the flight is finished and the machine is safe in the hangar. The engine is now all tuned up and ready, but there is always the possibility of something going wrong. This is one of the things that makes flying attractive, the aviators say, for the human being is always lured by the element of chance. In flying over desert and mountain country he may be called upon to think and act very quickly to save the plane and himself.

Lieutenant Fetters, who is in command of the Ogden expedition, had a very exciting experience at Mather field only a short time before starting for Ogden. While flying among a number of other planes, his machine and another collided and started on a downward crash to the ground several thousand feet below. For a time they continued to fall, locked in a death embrace. But aviators never accept a situation which seems inevitable as long as they are in the air, and this fact saved the lives of the two men, they were able to get the machines separated and landed freely before it was too late to avoid a smash.

Both of the lieutenants state that they thoroughly enjoy the life of aviators, for it is these narrow escapes that bring compensating thrills into the game.

Mr. Wattis won his ride in the airplane by the large amount of Victory bonds sold through the Utah National bank, of which he is president, the institution having placed its customers' $250,000 worth of bonds.

Mr. Bigelow, who took the second turn over the city, won his flight by the large purchases of bonds through the Ogden State bank. Army orders permitted only two men to take flights, being the one who bought the most and the one who sold the most bonds, this special courtesy having been granted as a reward for activities in the campaign.

In commenting on his flight, Mr. Wattis said:

"It was a wonderful experience. I had often figured what it would be like, but it was like nothing that I had expected. Impressions crowded so thick and were so varied that I feel I can never get through analyzing them. Of course the roaring of the machinery and the tremendous velocity of the wind prevented all communication by speech. I never once looked at the man behind or tried to. When he touched my shoulder I leaned to the right or to the left as indicated, so that he might see the gauges which were in front. I am told he gave one rather spectacular 'nose dive' and I believe it. I knew something of the kind was happening, but it did not disconcert me at all. It was near the close of the flight and I was full of confidence by that time. The movements that made me feel most shaky were when the machine would turn. One wing would dip low and the pressure coming on one side made me feel insecure. I could pick out the principal buildings, streets, roads, streams, and other large objects, but an odd feeling came from the fact that over the city I could see no people, no vehicles, yet I knew there must be thousands of them. The green trees blended with the lawns so that Lester and Liberty parks appeared to be simply green plots with white ribbons of pathways, which were the bisecting roads.

"I readily located our course by such structures as the brick factory at Harrisville, the U. I. C. buildings at Brown, the S. P. shops, Eccles Building, State School for Deaf, and the brick yards, with the tall chimney near 29th street and Jefferson avenue. I knew very well when we were over the city cemetery, but I could not whistle to keep up courage.

Sees His Home

"I located my own home because of its proximity to the big Eccles house at 26th and Jefferson. Knew there were some people out watching, but it impressed me strangely that I could not see them. A host of odd fancies and memories rushed through my mind as for a few moments I could look over the hills of Utah and the slim white thread that I knew was Weber river. I realized when we turned north and soon thereafter felt that we were descending because I noticed on one of the country roads a horse and buggy. It reminded me of a dog hitched to a doll carriage.

"I did not seem at any time to have the impression that I have heard described to the effect that we were still and the earth was moving. But, it did seem we were laboring hard and the tremendous wind was holding us back. When we passed over the field I supposed we must circle it two or three times to get lower down before we would try to stop, but I guessed wrong. We went north of the field. Then came a quick nose dive or something in the course of which I remember seeing sky and then earth in quick succession. Then we planned slowly down and a few seconds later touched the earth with hardly a jar, glided over the field a few rods, turned and volplaned to the starting point. I am peculiarly subject to sea sickness, but experienced nothing of that nature on my first air trip.

"I was so interested that I thought we had been in the air only about half the time we were really up and as we had started later than I had expected, it was necessary for me to jump in a car and hasten to the Orpheum theatre, arriving there just in time to take part with my family in the Mothers' Day exercises."

INFORMAL RECEPTION GIVEN AT THE OLD BROWN HOME

The Ogden high school cadets and fifty students from Weber under the command of Mr. Handrickson, made a splendid appearance in the parade Saturday, representing the original Mormon battalion, who made their famous 2000 mile march in 1846. The battalion was the first military organization to enter Utah, hence was accorded the honor of leading the military division of the parade.

One of the guns used by the battalion in '46 was carried in the parade Saturday, being lent for the occasion by Mrs. Zimmerman. The gun belonged to her father.

The success of the boys in the parade was due to Robert Wilson, who worked unceasingly that the famous Mormon battalion might receive this manifestation of honor to their memory.

The Mormon battalion float represented the transfer of the Goodyear tract of land, now comprising Ogden city and the greater part of Weber county, to Captain James Brown, Company C, Mormon battalion, by Miles N. Goodyear, January, 1848. Charles Brown impersonated his father, Captain Brown, and Merlin Stone portrayed Miles N. Goodyear.

Captain Brown later donated the site of Ogden city to the settlers. His former home opposite the tabernacle, was beautifully decorated and an informal reception was held there by the Daughters of Ogden chapter for the Salt Lake Daughters of the Battalion.

ALHAMBRA PRESENTS ELABORATE SETTING

Stage carpenters worked all day Sunday placing the new stage settings and draperies recently purchased by Manager Skinner from the Flag Studio of Los Angeles. It will require three days to complete the work. The set is, without question, the most elaborate arrangement of any showhouse in America. Gorgeous gold tapestries, dotted with the new bright colors which are all the rage. The tile floor at the bottom of the screen, and the massive marble effects, present a view one will never tire of seeing. The famous painting of the return of the George Washington peace ship, which was selected by Hart Schaffner & Marx, for their national advertising, is reproduced in life-size, and will fill the magnificent frame when the motion picture is not exhibited.

This great painting was executed by one of the greatest scenic artists in this country, and presented to the Alhambra theatre by the Fred M. Nye company of this city. Mr. Nye is a generous advertiser, and in this particular has secured a prominence of his firm's name that will distinctly mark the name of F. M. The increase will go in effect May 1, and if the rates are finally set aside the company will refund the difference to subscribers, according to an announcement made Saturday.

UNITED STATES ACCEPTS PLAN

WASHINGTON, May 12.—Proposals have been made at Paris by the British and French governments that the United States accept as part payment for loans advanced them notes and bonds of some of the South American republics, including Brazil, which they had been no opposition to the plan and that the United States had approved it because it would remove some of the interests of the European powers in the American continent and thus accord with the principle of the Monroe doctrine.

Commenting on the statement at Rio de Janeiro by Madeiros de Albuquerque, a leading journalist of Brazil regarding the transfer of debts, state department officials emphasized that there was no desire on the part of the United States to exert any influence on Brazil's internal affairs.

The attack on the United States by the Brazilian journalist caused surprise in official and diplomatic circles in Washington, it being pointed out that during his stay of seven months in this country he voiced no opinion of hostility and frequently expressed the friendship of Brazil for the United States. It was learned today at the Brazilian embassy that while he was in New York he sent several dispatches to his paper praising the United States for its part in the war and its interest in Pan-American affairs.

GERMAN TROOPS OCCUPY LEIPSI

COPENHAGEN, May 12.—The occupation of Leipzig by some thousands of soldiers belonging to the forces of Gustav Noske, the minister of defense, was a complete surprise, says a dispatch from Berlin to the National Tidende. The Spartacists were able to make only a light resistance.

A state of siege was immediately declared and steps were taken to restore the authority of the government.

ELKS ENTERTAIN THE SOLDIERS AND NURSES

Nearly one hundred automobile loads of convalescent soldiers from Fort Douglas, accompanied by nurses, were brought to Ogden yesterday by the Ogden and Salt Lake Elks. The cars were furnished by members of the Salt Lake lodge, who also supplied the boys with cigars and cigarettes. The nurses from the Fort hospital furnished an abundant supply of candy.

Upon their arrival in Ogden the soldiers were served with a buffet lunch at the home of the Ogden Elks and they were later taken on a trip through the canyon.

Moving pictures of the event were taken by the Elks company and will be shown throughout the country with the "Weekly Events."

There were 790 soldiers and nurses in the party, accompanied by almost as many Elks and their ladies.

For an hour the guests viewed the beauties of Ogden canyon. After a short wait at the Hermitage to permit the riders to stretch their legs, the cars returned to Ogden. At the Elks club there was a scene of gay festivity. Garbed in white uniforms, the members of the Ogden Girls' band sat on the porch in front of the club and played a welcoming selection.

Unloading from the cars, the visitors were ushered into the clubroom and handed a supply of sandwiches, milk chocolate, cake, coffee and other refreshments. There were big stacks of sandwiches on plates and cups for those with extra heavy appetites.

An hour of rest on the lawn followed. Aggie's band played popular songs and Ogden girls mingled with the soldiers and made them feel thoroughly at home. Genuine Indians in native regalia wandered over to the clubhouse and cheerfully posed for pictures. An aeroplane flew over the city, dipping in salute to the crowd before the clubhouse.

At 3 o'clock the visitors started back. The cars left one at a time, forming a procession so that the motor man could get all in his picture.
